Commercial Drivers Certification

A new federal law went into effect last year that requires all commercial drivers to certify with the DMV whether they operate in interstate commerce and whether they need a Medical Examiner Certificate (fed med card). Interstate drivers who are required to have a fed med card are also required to keep a current copy of that card on record at the DMV. The DMV has developed an easy to use and free online application to help you stay in compliance with this federal law.

* Certify now- While you have until January 30, 2014, to tell us where you drive commercially, we strongly recommend doing it now. Submit your fed med, if needed.

* Certify online - This can easily be done on our website at www.cdl.wi.gov and usually takes only 5 to 10 minutes to complete.

Did You Know...

If a commercial driver qualifies for their CDL class license driving an automatic transmission tractor, they will only be endorsed to drive an automatic. If the driver qualifies driving a manual, they can drive either automatic or manual.

2013 NationalLease Leadership Circle Award Winners

McCoy NationalLease was among member companies who were honored at the 69th Annual Meeting in recognition for their outstanding commitment to the organization. This year, 38 member companies were cited for their commitment to NationalLease Member Standards and received awards from Dean Vicha, NationalLease President on Oct. 17 in Downers Grove, IL

Companies were chosen based on participation in national accounts; volunteer work on the NationalLease Board of Directors or other committees, teams, or task forces; use of technology to partner with NationalLease through websites and social media; and compliance with strict member guidelines such as participation in NationalLease GreenShop®, the organization's environmental awareness program.

The recipients of the 2013 Leadership Circle Award were chosen from NationalLease's 165 independently owned businesses.
